Yevhen "Wynt" Stalenko spent over €15,000 trying to lose weight before the start of 2019. But he hasn't got much further than he was a year ago after failing to shed any kilos at all in 2019. The Ukrainian has a kitchen packed with up to 30 storage bags of food every day, and meals are brought in to supplement his diet. Read more: Athletes trying to lose weight in Olympics The hero of summer 2017 has been training for the upcoming winter season, but has little to show for it. Footage of the fighter stepping on scales and doing his daily workout in the gym were posted to his Instagram page on June 5, as Wynt documented his weight loss attempts. Those who run the website Healthfixer.com have calculated the four-time WBO world featherweight champion's current weight is at 179kg (98kg more than he was last year). Stalenko has been notoriously hard to pin down on his food intake in the past. In 2018, he weighed out at 168kg and told Russian media he kept a strict diet, including no alcohol and sugar. He added: "I'm doing everything right, but I'm not losing weight." Read more: London 2012 hosts face cutbacks over expected Olympic Games budget He told 100% Magazine in 2017, when he was vying for the World Boxing Association belt: "I eat on average six times a day, I always have my own protein shake, I drink herbal tea, but I'm not always sure what it's from. "I used to drink about 30 to 50 glasses of tea a day, I do that because I feel more relaxed. I drink a lot of tea every day." Stalenko has been preparing for the upcoming winter season and said earlier this year he expects to use 'tricks' to drop a few kilos. "I'm trying to use the cold temperatures to my advantage as it's easier to keep weight off in the winter than in the summer," he told Ukrainian news outlet Levestar. "I've become very efficient. I'm doing it all the time, since I started at the end of 2018. In the gym I'm walking, using weights, doing calisthenics, punching the walls, all that kind of stuff. I should have done that from the beginning, but now it's about doing it even more

Q: Java - using regex to translate special characters from an input string I have a problem of using regex for the translation of special characters. Say I have this sentence: "Hello, world". And I want to remove all special characters other than numbers, then I can use the following: String string = "Hello, world"; String stringregexp = "[\\p{L}\\p{N}]+"; // your regular expression Pattern pattern = Pattern.compile(stringregexp); Matcher matcher = pattern.matcher(string); while (matcher.find()){ String newString = matcher.group(); } Output is: Hello Now I want to get rid of all special characters and numbers. But for this kind of sentence it is not possible to use the regex. How can I format my regex to achieve this? It can be a loop that checks for every character (e.g. one for special characters and one for numbers) and then is simply a loop that replaces all not allowed characters with normal characters. A new sentence as input might be: "Hello, 42"; and the output should be: Hello42 A: For your specific example, one way to process the sequence could be: String sentence = "Hello, world"; Pattern pattern = Pattern.compile("\\p{L}\\p{N}+"); // your regular expression Matcher matcher = pattern.matcher(sentence); StringBuffer result = new StringBuffer(); while (matcher.find()) result.append(Character.isLetter(matcher.group().charAt(0)) ? matcher.group() : matcher.group()+"42"); System.out.println(result.toString()); (I'm assuming that you don't need the punctuation.)
